GLASS SONG.

I.

A joyful season now is closing,
Round which memory loves to dwell,
And as we leave the scenes of pleasure,
We must say to all, farewell!
Our first volume is completed,
“And its varied pages bear
Impress of our thoughts and actions,
Traced in changeless records there.”

II.

We are going forth to battle
With the sterner things of life;
We must write another volume,
Which shall tell of toil and strife;
And we may not seek the guidance
Which our youthful hearts have known;
Our's the part in life's great future,
Where we each must act alone.

III.

Let it be our first endeavor,
In this battle then to win,
Be it here our glorious calling—
Though the conflict hard may seem,
To possess the lasting honors
That pertain to life above,
That when this volume is completed,
Our reward shall be “well done.”

Respectfully,

LUCY and IDA.
